In the customary manner of Scottish graveyards, the stones are aligned with respect to the church building. As the church faces south of east, the rows run on a northeast to southwest axis. The stones are therefore facing towards the southeast.

The stones are identified by by two letters, DB, denoting Dunbarney Parish, followed by a letter, signifying the row, followed by a two-digit number. The row letters read alphabetically from northwest to southeast, while the number identifies the stone reading from northeast to southwest in the row. Therefore, DB-J08 is in the 10th row from the northwest, and is the 8th stone from the northeast end of the row.
