The church is no longer used for worship and is now a private house.

As is the custom of most Scottish Kirkyards, the graves are laid out in lines running on an approximate north-south axis, therefore, having their faces towards east or west.

The identification of a stone is as follows. Tay Valley FHS identification of Kinnettles Kirkyard is KT- followed by a single letter, followed by a number. The letter identifies the row reading from west to east, and the number identifies the stone numbering southwards from the northern end of the row.

Row A is a collection of stones at the south wall of the former church on the north side of the path, numbering west to east, while row B is comprised of all the stones to the south side of the path, opposite the south wall of the church building. All other rows, C to M, are from the east end of the building towards the eastern boundary of the Kirkyard.

Hence stone KT-H10 is within Kinnettles Kirkyard, in the sixth row from the east end of the church building, and the tenth stone from the northern end of the row.
